ity of persons having their photographs taken in the dark. He says:

"Among the many novel ideas the discovery of photography has suggested, is the following rather curious experiment or speculation. I have never tried it, indeed, nor am I aware that anyone else has either tried it or proposed it; yet I think it is one which, if properly managed, must inevitably succeed.

"When a ray of solar light is refracted by a prism and thrown upon a screen, it forms the very beautiful colored band known by the name of the solar spectrum. Experimenters have found that if this spectrum is thrown upon a sheet of sensitive paper, the violet end of it produces the principal effect; and, what is truly remarkable, a similar effect is produced by certain invisible rays which lie beyond the violet and beyond the limits of the spectrum, whose existence is revealed to us only by this action which they exert.

"Now, I propose to separate these invisible rays from the rest by suffering them to pass into an adjoining apartment through an aperture in the wall or screen of partition. This apartment would then become filled (we must not call it illuminated) with invisible rays, which might be scattered in all directions by a convex lens placed behind the aperture. If there were a number of persons in the room, no one would see the other; and yet, nevertheless, if a camera was so placed as to point in the direction in which anyone was standing, it would take his portrait and reveal his actions. For, to use a metaphor we have already employed, the eye of the camera would see plainly where the human eye would find nothing but darkness.

"Alas that this speculation is somewhat too refined to be introduced with effect into a modern novel or romance! For what a dénouement we should have if we could suppose the secrets of the darkened chamber to be revealed by the testimony of the imprinted paper!"

It may be noted that photographs have been made in the dark by a process similar to that described by Talbot. But it is only recent discovery of various properties of the invisible ultraviolet light that has turned its photographic utilization from the merely curious to a valuable and promising field for scientific research.

FUN WITH ROYAL INITIALS

CAROLINE FOX, in her memorials, under date of May 24, 1837 (Queen Victoria's birthday), jots down an egregious pun reported by her famous kinsman, Charles James Fox.

"Uncle Charles dined with us today. He was delighted and dazzled by the display on the Queen's Day, and mentioned a right merry quibble perpetrated by my Lord Albemarle, who on her Majesty's saying, 'I wonder if my good people of London are as glad to see me as I am to see them?' pointed out, as their immediate Cockney answer to the query, 'V. R.'"

JOKES run in cycles. Sixty-five years later Edward VII. was on the English throne. Sir Walter Parratt, professor of music at the University of Oxford, was practising with part of his band in the music room at Windsor Palace, where all the furniture was covered with sheets bearing the royal cipher.

Suddenly he turned to the musicians and said, "We all know that the King is King; but why is he?"

The men looked astonished; but said nothing.

"Because E. R., of course!" chuckled Sir Walter as he pointed to the initials around him.

A MORE humorous jest of this sort is found in the life of Richard H. Barham, author of the "Ingoldsby Legends."

On the night of January 25, 1842, the late King of England was christened Albert Edward. Barham, going out to see the illumination, and observing in almost every window the initials A. E., heard some one say (most likely it was himself):

"Ah, he'll make acquaintance with the other three vowels before he comes of age!"

WHEN Napoleon III. celebrated his first birthday after becoming Emperor, the city of Paris was fully illuminated, and a conspicuous feature was the initial N in the center of a flaming laurel crown.

"The Emperor seems to be very popular," suggested an English visitor.

His friend replied, "Not at all. Il a trop d'N mis."

The pun cannot be translated; but its point may be inferred if it be hinted that N mis would be pronounced the same as enemi (enemy).
